THE NEW BASTILE.

Description of the Place for the Reception of Criminals.

A GAZETTE reporter yesterday met Mr. H. Burkholder, a gentleman representing the Globe Iron Works, of Chicago, who is in the city superintending the putting in of the iron work on the new jail. In company with Mr. Burkholder the reporter visited the jail and examined the cells, which were manufactured by the Globe Iron Works, of which Mr. Streeter is proprietor. The cells are practically prisoner-proof, and the unfortunate who finds himself incarcerated in one of them may as well reconcile himself until the expiration of his sentence. They are constructed of heavy plate iron, welded at intersections to angle iron, with grating bar fronts, massive stone floors and walls underneath and around and over all a roof of iron. Peep holes have been constructed between the jailor's apartments and cells, through which the jailor has all the prisoners under his direct and immediate supervision without going into their corridor. In addition to this he has under his control a very ingenious mechanism by means of which a simple turn of a wheel, placed in his apartment, will lock or unlock, as may be desired, every door of every cell instantly. Mr. Streeter erected 488 cells similar to these in the Bridewell at Chicago, many hundreds more at various other points throughout the country, and is one of the largest and most successful jail builders on this continent. Las Vegas and San Miguel County have now as strong and complete a jail as can be found in the United States.

FORT UNION NOTES.

C. Hunt, who has been doing Las Vegas for the past few days, arrived home as happy as ever.
 Lieutenant Bullard, a recent appointee from the Military Academy, arrived here and was assigned to Company F.
 The hop given by the officers and ladies of the garrison last evening was a most brilliant affair. The hours were whiled away to the strains of music entrancing. At 11 o'clock a sumptuous repast was served at the residence of Mrs. Lieutenant Plummer, a charming society lady.
 Mr. Frank T. Robinson has opened up his samples of fine clothing at the Plaza Hotel, and they are now ready for inspection. He made a special effort during his visit in the East to secure a nobby line of fine goods, and his samples cannot be equalled anywhere. An elegant suit can be ordered for from $20 to $80, a perfect fit being guaranteed in every instance. Mr. Robinson will in the future be in his sample-room every morning, and every afternoon he will be found in East Las Vegas.
